Senate rejects Tower with a 53-47 vote Bush gets his first major defeat from Democratic-controlled Congress

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Thursday rejected the nomination of John Tower as defense secretary, 53-47, handing President Bush a major defeat in his first high-stakes showdown with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The White House said Bush would act swiftly to submit a replacement nomination to the Senate.

Tower was scuttled by concerns about his drinking habits coupled with senatorial unhappiness that he had left his government post as arms negotiator and quickly began earning hundreds of thousands of dollars as a defense industry consultant.

The vote was the culmination of a tumultuous six-day Senate debate and closely followed party lines. Howell Heflin of Alabama, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Christopher Dodd of Connecticut were the only Democrats to support the nomination. One Republican — Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas — voted against.

Tower, in a statement he delivered at the Pentagon moments after the vote, said, "I will be recorded as the first Cabinet nominee in the history of the republic to be rejected in the first 90 days of a presidency and perhaps be harshly judged."

"But I depart from this place at peace with myself, knowing that I have given a full measure of devotion to my country."

Tower said no other public figure "has been subjected to such a far-reaching and thorough investigation nor had his human foibles bared to such intensive and demeaning public scrutiny."

"And yet, there is no finding that I have ever breached established legal and ethical standards nor been derelict in my duty," he said.

The Senate rendered its verdict in an atmosphere of unusual formality. Vice President Dan Quayle presided over the session, practically all senators remained in their chairs during the roll call and the gallery was packed with spectators.

"We ought to hang our heads after what we've done to this good man," Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said in a final defiant speech of support before the roll was called.

"America has lost a good public servant. The president has won because he stood by his man."

Majority Leader George Mitchell summed up for the opponents, saying that Tower's experience and competence on defense issues weren't at issue. But "serious problems exist" with conflict of interest and "character integrity," he said.

He said, "I emphasize my strongly held belief that this should not be interpreted as a vote to harm the president," but acknowledged that others saw it that way.

The rejection of Tower marked only the ninth time in history that the Senate has turned down a president's Cabinet nominee, and the first such decision since 1959 when the Senate voted against confirming President Eisenhower's nominee for secretary of commerce, Lewis L. Strauss.

Bush dodged reporters' questions as he departed for a trip to New York, but his press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said, "If necessary, we'll come up with a (new) candidate very rapidly."

Names most frequently mentioned in White House speculation as a replacement candidate included Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the ranking GOP member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a former secretary of the Navy; former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and former Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Alaska. Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, also was mentioned but told reporters "no," he was not in line for the post.

The debate drew to an end with the last handful of uncommitted senators declaring their intentions.

Kassebaum was the only Republican to break ranks with her party.

Cougar Employment is legal, says County attorney's office

By JIM RAYBURN
and BRADY BINGHAM
Universe Staff Writers

The Utah County Attorney's Office said a story in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Universe on a plea bargain agreement with Steve Jones, owner of Cougar Employment Service, was incorrect because no charges were ever filed against Jones and no such agreement was made.

Richard Casto, chief investigator at the Utah County Attorney's Office, said an investigation by his office concluded Jones did not violate any laws.

"We found him to be doing nothing illegal and nothing in violation with the law," said Casto. "The case was closed because we could not find any violations of the law."

Craig Madsen, division chief of criminal justice at the county attorney's office, said there was never a plea bargain agreement with Jones, because Jones was never found to be violating any law.

Marty Hill, 20, a junior from Blackfoot, Idaho, with a double major in political science education and speech education, and BYU Ombudsman, said Frank Wall, an investigator with the county attorney's office, told him that Madsen had determined the case was not worth prosecuting because it would only be a Class C Misdemeanor.

According to Hill, Wall said a plea bargain was made to drop the case providing Jones met certain requirements established by the county attorney's office.

Wall, however, said he reviewed the case with Madsen and they both agreed there was no criminal violation. Wall said he explained to Hill the circumstances that must be present before filing a charge, and Hill misinterpreted his statements as pertaining to Jones.

"I told Hill at that time that Jones had violated no criminal law," said Wall. "There was nothing we could take him to court on. I was trying to explain to Hill that there was nothing we could prosecute Jones on and he misinterpreted my explanation."

Madsen said a plea bargain was never made with Jones. "There was no plea to bargain," said Madsen. "It is important to emphasize that Jones is guilty of no crime."

Madsen said Jones was never guilty of a Class C Misdemeanor or any other class of crime in regard to his business.

Casto said his office received two complaints about the operation of Cougar Employment Services. He said the complaints concerned a $10 surcharge Jones levied every time someone called his service. Casto said US West asked Jones to explain the surcharge to anyone who called the employment service and give them a chance to turn the service down before they were charged.

Casto said Jones showed him contracts he had with local fast-food restaurants to provide them with employees. Casto said the contracts demonstrated that Jones was, in fact, serving as a legitimate employment service. He also said Jones quickly complied with US West's request to disclose the surcharge. Investigators found no evidence Jones was doing anything illegal in his business practices, said Casto.

Casto said Jones was "extremely cooperative and helpful with the entire investigation."

According to Hill, Wall said that under the terms of the agreement Jones must repay anyone who can prove they placed a call to the service prior to the time the disclosure was added. Wall, however, told The Daily Universe Jones made the decision to repay the money without any influence from the attorney's office.

Hill said he has received seven more complaints this week from people who are unsatisfied with the Cougar Employment Service. He said the ombudsman's office will continue to pursue the matter.

The Daily Universe was unable to reach Jones for comment.

BYU will receive the computer hardware and software that will run a new program during track meets. The new system has been "generously" given to BYU by Novell and Macintosh.

BYU gets electronic program from Novell and Macintosh

By STEVEN K. POWELL
Universe Staff Writer

BYU will possibly receive the hardware today that will be used to drive the program for the first totally electronically run track and field meet in the United States.

"The Physical Education Services developed the program on Macintosh to run track meets," said Bruce F. Holly.

Novell and Macintosh have made the "generous gifts" of computer hardware and software to the BYU College of Physical Education.

The equipment will be used to run the new program during track meets, said Holly.

Susan Richards, Novell spokesperson, said "The (new BYU computer program) system is similar to the one that ran the track and field events at the 1988 Summer Olympics (in Seoul, Korea), and will be the first of its kind put into operation in the United States."

Holly said that Novell NetWare (a type of software) ran the computerized system for the Olympic Track and Field events, and Novell has donated the hardware and the software to run the new BYU program.

He said the NCAA Track and Field Championships, that will be held at BYU from May 30 to June 3, will be the first Collegiate meet to be electronically run.

"(The new system) will be tested at the High School Invitational Track Meet, the oldest and largest (high school track meet) in the nation, which started in 1911 and has been held every year since then except for 1942 and 1943 during the war. The high school meet will be on May 5 and 6, and will be used to work out any bugs in the system," said Holly.

Richard S. Rose, 35, a senior from Gaithersburg, Md., majoring in electrical engineering, who is a systems analyst/programmer with BYU Physical Education Services, said that to create the program "we have to incorporate all the rules how the track meet is run and how the athletes are placed in heats and flights."

The pilots are blamed

Eastern Airlines files Chapter 11

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eastern Airlines filed for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court Thursday, the sixth day of a Machinists strike, blaming pilots for a "cash crisis" that paralyzed the nation's seventh-largest airline.

The move came a day after Eastern insisted such a step remained a last resort in the airline's effort to endure the strike, which had strong support from pilots and flight attendants and was costing Eastern an estimated $4 million a day.

The filing under Chapter 11 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York is designed to give Eastern a reprieve from debts while it tries to restructure and extricate itself from the worst crisis in its 60-year history.

Eastern boss Frank Lorenzo blamed "the damage that has been caused by the pilots union." He and Eastern President Phil Bakes insisted they intend to restore the airline in bankruptcy court, though in a smaller form.

"We tried mightily to keep Eastern from bankruptcy," Bakes said at a news conference. "We intend to operate our airline: make no mistake about that."

Bakes said Eastern faces a "cash crisis that can only be averted and stabilized by" turning to the bankruptcy court.

Union leaders lashed out at Lorenzo as a "robber baron." Machinists called for a public boycott of Eastern's sister airline, Continental, and said they would oppose Eastern's reorganization plan and any sale of assets.

Lorenzo and Bakes pledged that all creditors would be paid in full; shareholders would receive "fair value"; passengers would be protected; and as many employees as possible would return to work.

Eastern had 31,200 employees before the strike.

John Peterpaul, a Machinists vice president, said Eastern filed for bankruptcy on payday "in a spiteful attempt to deny Eastern workers their last paycheck earned before the strike." Paychecks were frozen by the move.

John Bavis, head of the Eastern pilots union, said management continued calling pilots at home in hopes some will return to work. He said the effort would fail.

Henry Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, said he hoped the move meant Lorenzo is "finished" at Eastern.

The company, which has a staggering $2.5 billion debt, has admitted it was taken by surprise when most of the 3,600 Eastern pilots honored Machinists' picket lines, forcing Miami-based Eastern to shut down nearly all operations Monday and lay off 9,500 non-union employees.

Senate committee approves wage hike

By GERTRUD STIEFLER
Senior Reporter

A $1.30 minimum-wage increase was passed by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee this week, but without amendments the proposal runs the risk of being vetoed by President Bush.

Sens. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and James Jeffords, R-Vt., joined the panel's nine Democrats for an 11-5 vote.

Although both parties agree that an increase is necessary, they are divided over the amount of the increase and whether or not to link the increase to a sub-minimum wage for the newly hired.

Bush favors a modest wage hike of 30 cents per year over three years to $4.25, but only if linked with a so-called "training wage," of $3.35, the current minimum wage, applying to new employees during the first six months.

Bush has said he will veto any increase exceeding $4.25.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., proponent of the gradual increase to $4.65 that just passed, said in his opening remarks Tuesday that a "training wage" without any training was senseless and that such an amendment would only "reward" employers with high employee turnover.

"If you have minimum wage workers now, fire them, and you can hire on a new crew for 20 percent less than you paid before," he said.

Kennedy proposed instead what he called a "stay-in-school wage," which would allow employers to pay only 85 percent of the minimum wage to full-time students. This might create jobs for students, but not allow the job to take the student's attention away from his schoolwork, he said.

Sub-minimum wage jobs "would be no more than bait that could entrap our students into dropping out of school," Kennedy said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has led the opposition to Kennedy's plan, said before the panel that a minimum wage increase "could jeopardize jobs for the very group of people we say we want to help," namely the unskilled, inexperienced and disadvantaged workers.

He called a training wage absolutely necessary. "The proposal made by the President would offset 61.5 percent of the projected loss of 650,000 jobs at the $4.65 rate," he said, using Labor Department statistics.

Peter Barth, corporate counsel for Smith's Food and Drug, which employs 12,000 people in eight states — about one-third of them in Utah — said, "(An increase) would be difficult for us in a business like ours because

Elder Perry stresses mission service

By DORIS HERNANDEZ
Universe Staff Writer

Young men and women can show their love and commitment to Heavenly Father by serving a mission, said Elder L. Tom Perry of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles at Thursday night's missionary conference.

Elder Perry said the Lord wants young men and women to fulfill full-time missions and receive the blessings that come from service.

The number of missionaries as well as the number of temples and meeting houses being built is increasing every day, said Elder Perry. There are missionaries laboring in 79 countries and there are 88 more countries that need to hear the gospel. There is work for everyone and all should take advantage of this great opportunity, he said.

"Joy is what we all desire," said Perry. "Joy is a product of service." He said all have the opportunity to serve by going on a mission. The joy in the Kingdom of God will be great if we bring one soul to the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Perry said the work of the Lord is directed toward the salvation of men. Each one of us has the responsibility to go and preach the gospel to all the world. The Lord expects it from all, Elder Perry said.

At the present time, about one fifth of eligible young men serve full-time missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "This is not pleasing to the Lord," said Elder Perry. "We must do better."

A mission should be regarded as a priesthood duty that every young man should look forward to. It is a privilege to serve the Lord for two years with one's heart, mind, and strength. School, scholarships and even temple

Outside prosecutor won't delay execution

SALT LAKE CITY — Execution of William Andrews, sentenced 15 years ago to die for his role in the 1974 torture-slayings of three people will not be delayed by the appointment of an outside prosecutor, according to Utah Attorney General Paul Van Dam.

Pierre Dale Selby, executed by lethal injection in 1987, and Andrews were convicted of killing a man and two women during an April 22, 1974, robbery of the Ogden Hi Fi-Shop. The two forced the three victims, along with two others who survived, to drink caustic drain cleaner. The victims were then shot.

Andrews has argued his death sentence is unjustified since he did not shoot the victims. However, he did acknowledge administering the drain cleaner, an act that prosecutors contend itself was life-threatening.

Van Dam, who has been in office only two months, doesn't hesitate when asked whether Andrews' execution will be delayed.

"No. Not one day. Not one hour," he said. "We've met every hearing date."

Andrews, whose appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court have been rejected three times, has moved into what attorneys see as the final phase of his battle to avoid implementation of the death penalty.

Currently, his case is before the Utah Supreme Court, which has been asked to reconsider its Oct. 27, 1988, rejection of his appeal.

Coalition seeks ban on store beer sales

SALT LAKE CITY — An anti-alcohol citizens group is lobbying state lawmakers to ban beer sales at convenience stores, separate beer from food displays in markets, and restrict radio and television advertising of the beverage.

The Alcohol Policy Coalition, formed last month, said the goal of laws they are proposing for the 1990 session of the Legislature is to keep minors from consuming beer. However, spokesmen for Utah's convenience stores promise strong opposition to the ban.

The coalition outlined its intentions Wednesday before the Citizens Council on Alcoholic Beverage Control, a state agency. The council did not take a position, but its members said they were skeptical such laws could pass or that they would be effective.

Dr. George Van Komen, chairman of the Controlled Substances Committee for the Utah Medical Association and head of the 16-member coalition, said 30 percent of the nation's youngsters between ages 12 and 20 drink every weekend.

Ozone presents moral problem for West

LONDON — The debate over preserving the ozone layer dramatizes the gap between the industrialized West, which pledges to clean up pollutants it no longer needs, and developing nations that are just beginning to use them.

Prodded by increasing scientific evidence that chlorofluorocarbons, known as CFCs, are destroying the ozone shield, the West has promised to ban or significantly reduce their use by the end of the century.

Third World countries do not dispute the facts and figures, but are just embarking on large-scale expansion of refrigeration, air conditioning, plastics and electronics industries, most of which depend on CFCs.

"This raises a major moral problem in the West," Australia's science minister acknowledged at an international conference in London this week on the ozone layer, which filters out cancer-causing ultraviolet rays from the sun.

The dispute recalls the 1960s debate over the insecticide DDT. The West discovered it was harmful to both plants and animals and imposed bans or restrictions in 1970-71 against the wishes of developing nations, which feared a resurgence of disease-carrying insects.

Kufrin pleads guilty to attempted theft

PROVO — The former live-in boyfriend of a missing Spanish Fork woman has pleaded guilty to one count of attempted theft in a plea-bargain arrangement.

Michael I. Kufrin, 32, entered the plea Thursday during an appearance before 4th District Judge Boyd Park. Deputy Utah County Attorney Phil Hadfield said Kufrin had access to an employer's business vehicle in Payson, and on Oct. 5, 1988, took the vehicle to Nevada where it was recovered nearly three months later.

Before the proceeding began, one courtroom spectator asked Kufrin, "Mike, where's Peggy?" The spectator likely was referring to Peggy Ellsworth Case, with whom Kufrin shared a Spanish Fork apartment.

Authorities say Case vanished after a party on July 9, 1988. Kufrin sold her furniture to a neighbor and left town in early October. Authorities never have identified Kufrin as a suspect in Case's disappearance, but Spanish Fork Police Chief Dee Rosenbaum has said foul play is suspected.

Foreign tourists expelled from Lhasa

BEIJING — Foreign tourists were expelled from Lhasa on Thursday, and Chinese troops began rounding up Tibetans in the city and hauling them away in trucks, a Tibetan woman said.

China said four more people had died after suffering injuries earlier this week in the Tibetan capital during bloody protests of Chinese communist rule in the remote mountain region.

The report brought the official death toll to 16. Western travelers have quoted Tibetans as saying that many more have died. Most Tibetans reportedly put the figure at between 20 and 30.

"They're grabbing everyone," said the Tibetan woman, interviewed late Thursday by telephone from Beijing. "Soldiers are all over the place and they're grabbing everyone."

Several foreigners who work in Lhasa have been allowed to remain, but foreign tourists, estimated at 140, were ordered to leave by Thursday — the eve of the 30th anniversary of a rebellion in Tibet.

Clear forecast

Job market good for engineers

by KATHY HARPER
Universe Staff Writer

The forecast for this year's engineering graduates is clear and sunny prospects in the job market. According to Graduating Engineer magazine, the market demand is up a strong 5 percent over last year, with salaries increasing about 4 percent.

"Placement of the student body in general is estimated in the 70 percents. Engineering is estimated in the 90 percents," said Wayne Hansen, managing director of education and placement at the Placement Center.

Engineering has consistently had one of the highest placement rates on campus, said Hansen.

"This year we can't find enough students to keep the employers happy," he said.

Placement manager Lloyd Hawkins agreed. "Usually with an engineering degree the demand exceeds the supply."

"There are a lot of trips (to plants) and a lot of offers out there this year," said Frank Tracy, 22, a senior majoring in chemical engineering from Brem.

In talking with students, Pam Williamson of the engineering college advisement center said students have a wide variety of top companies to select from.

"This year students are able to pick and choose which companies they will visit. They are receiving so many plant trip offers they have to limit themselves so they don't miss too much school," she said. She also said some are having a lot of frustration deciding which plant trips to take.

One student who was having trouble deciding went on 10 plant trips.

Peter Roueche, a senior majoring in chemical engineering from McLean, Va., said companies have flown him to Texas, Michigan, Louisiana, California, Kentucky and West Virginia.

"They like to wine you and dine you to get you to join their company," said John Wright, 23, a senior from Kingston, N. Y. majoring in chemical engineering. He said that on one trip a chauffeur met him at the airport, he stayed at a penthouse suite in a hotel and dined in very expensive restaurants.

However, students never get their hopes up until they get a formal offer, said Williamson.

"A plant trip is a very positive indication that the company is interested in you," she said. That doesn't mean a student will automatically get a formal offer, but she hasn't heard of many rejections.

The Chemical Engineering Department has excellent prospects for its graduating seniors. "This year we will have 100 percent placement," said William Pitt a professor in the department.

"If graduating engineers put the same effort into finding out about an employer as they do researching a stereo to buy, chances are they will get the job of their choice," said Graduating Engineer magazine.

Lamanite Week at BYU to be held March 13-18

The cultures of American Indians, Polynesians and Latin Americans, will be featured March 13-18 at BYU's Lamanite Week.

The theme for this year's Lamanite Week is "Ancient Traditions, New Horizons." The Tribe of Many Feathers Indian Club, Polynesian Club and Mexican American Student club members are planning this year's festivities.

Events include cultural workshops, a Latin fiesta, Polynesian luau, alumni dinner, student speech competition, student awards banquet, Lamanite week dance, a 5K fun run, two performances by Lamanite Generation and the Cedartree Memorial dance competition.

Daily events include cultural displays in the ELWC garden court, featuring native craftsmen showing beadwork, silversmithing, lei-making and other handicrafts. A student and professional arts and crafts display will also be presented.

Monday through Thursday at noon, students from the three clubs will be involved in presenting a 45-minute program of music and dance representing their culture. Workshops will follow the program and will feature speakers or activities which provide insight into each culture.

Lamanite week is sponsored by BYUSA and Student Leadership Development. All the activities are open to the general public.

Tax assistance available for public on BYU campus

by SUSAN M. NEIS
Universe Staff Writer

Income tax time is quickly approaching, and BYU students can turn to Voluntary Income Tax Assistance for help.

Becky Harrison, 25, director of the program, said the VITA office carries all state income tax forms except Colorado, Michigan and New Jersey. They also have, or have access to, every federal tax form.

Students can go to VITA for help with any questions they have concerning their income taxes, and student volunteers answer the questions for them. A student may go to VITA to fill out his tax forms with the assistance of a volunteer. The volunteers then check the forms for accuracy and completeness.

Last year the BYU VITA office helped 6,000 BYU students fill out their tax forms. Jan Hadley, the public affairs director for the Salt Lake district of the Internal Revenue Service, said the BYU chapter of VITA is the largest in the state. She said that last year 510 VITA offices helped 17,000 people. More than one third of those people were helped through the BYU office.

This year there are 80 volunteers in the BYU VITA office, and it is open Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Students who would like help with their taxes should go to 234 Memorial Lounge ELWC.

Harrison said students are urged not to wait until the last minute to come in for help because although the office will be open to pick up tax forms, there will be no volunteers in the office to provide assistance to students after April 7.

Columnist concerned with WAC problems, proud of BYU 'standing up to be counted'

By MARGARET MCKIE
Universe Staff Writer

Somebody has to take a stand against the problems in college athletics, Marion Dunn, sports columnist for the Provo Daily Herald, said Thursday.

Last Friday Dunn wrote in his column about the possibility BYU will leave the Western Athletic Conference. Dunn said he was proud of BYU's decision to stand up and be counted.

Dunn said according to his sources, BYU threatened to leave the WAC unless the problems of sportsmanship are dealt with, even though BYU officials have denied the threats.

Computer tutors, vitamin shelf-life, organ weights, effects of time on election voting, ground water flow in the Wasatch range and the evolution of slopes will all be discussed Saturday in the 1989 Spring Research Conference sponsored by the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

The conference is for students to present and share the results of research projects they have been work-

Dunn said the issue is not what players say to each other, but the loss of crowd control at the games when spectators throw things on the floor and hold up objectionable signs. He said BYU has been treated badly around the WAC and can't keep turning the other cheek.

Another problem in college athletics is the control TV has over the times of games. Dunn said he thought schools should play games when they are scheduled, not when television stations want to cover them.

Another problem is that some schools have people playing football and basketball who should be in prison, Dunn said. He said the University of Oklahoma, in particular, ing on, said Alvin Rencher an associate dean in the college. "We are really proud of our students. They've done a lot of work," he said.

"We do it once a year. It gives the opportunity to find out what is going on in other departments. There is a lot of exciting research going on ...," said Rencher.

Activities start at 8:30 a.m. with sessions held on the 2nd and 3rd floors of the MARB. About 108 presentations will be given, with activities concluding shortly after noon.

has been brought to its knees by some of their athletes.

Dunn said the WAC would be destroyed if BYU left. He said if BYU left, other teams, like the Air Force Academy, might leave also.

Army ROTC to begin competition

BYU will defend its title in Region Ranger Challenge

by SCOTT H. WAITE
Universe Staff Writer

The defending regional champion BYU Army ROTC Ranger Challenge team will march their title into competition this weekend in the Fourth ROTC Region Ranger Challenge Competition to be held in Fort Lewis, Wash.

"The intercollegiate competition will showcase the eight best ROTC teams in the 18 Western states," said Susan K. Shriver, information specialist with the Public Affairs Office of the Fourth ROTC Region. "Each of the nine-member teams has placed either first or second in competition among teams in their geographical area within the last year."

"I think we have a good chance at winning the competition," said Mark Carey, a member of the Ranger team. "We have some returning team members from last year's championship team."

Maj. Robert F. Turbyfill, coach of the team, is also optimistic about the team's chances. "We are as strong as we can be in all of the categories except patrolling," he said. "We haven't been able to train for this event as much as the others."

Turbyfill said that with a full team effort, "shooting and the rope bridge events are our strong points this year."

"Traditionally, our strong point has been the 10 kilometer run," said Carey.

"If we get behind, that is usually where we can make it up," he said. Turbyfill said he thinks Saint John's University will be BYU's strongest competition.

"They (St. John's) were leading the competition by nine points last year going into the last event," said Turbyfill. "We won the event and the competition by beating Saint John's by one point. They won't forget it that easily."

The events include the Army physical fitness test; managing a one-rope bridge, a timed event requiring each team member to cross a river without getting wet; marksmanship, a sharpshooting event using M-16 rifles; weapons assembly, a timed event requiring team members to assemble two weapons, with parts mixed in a pile; orienteering, a timed event of team members going after markers using a compass; grenade assault course, a timed and accuracy event in which team members negotiate six stations consisting of a variety of targets; patrolling, an all-night maneuver in which each team moves through a wooded area and secures a military objective; and the 10 kilometer road march, a timed event with teams covering the course in full combat gear and crossing the finish line together.

BYU's team will be competing against Central Washington University, Gonzaga University, Iowa State University, Saint John's University, University of Nevada-Las Vegas, University of Nevada-Reno and Metropolitan State University.

Low-impact aerobics gaining in popularity

By KARA LEIGH HAMILTON
Universe Staff Writer

Today's society has been on a fitness kick for a number of years. People are becoming more conscious of how they look and feel, and it seems as though most people will do anything to get in shape.

Aerobics have become a prevalent form of exercise for people who want to get physically fit and have fun at the same time.

But there is a certain kind of aerobics, called low-impact aerobics, that has become quite popular in the past few years, according to Birdie Speirs, an aerobics instructor for the Ridge Athletic Club in Provo.

Corrie Call, a senior majoring in public relations from Hooper, Utah, said the major difference between high- and low-impact aerobics is that in high-impact aerobics there is a lot of bouncing involved, which causes stress on the knees and joints.

Call, who has been doing aerobics for four years and taught aerobic classes at BYU during Spring and Fall Semesters in 1988, said high-impact aerobics could easily be compared to running or jogging.

"When people do all the jumping around that high-impact aerobics requires, the joints not only have to carry the body's weight, but also the pressure that the jumping causes," Call said.

She said when people do low-impact aerobics, they don't have as much pressure on the joints because there is no jumping involved. But they need to work harder to get their heart rate up than with high-impact aerobics. They need to bend their knees more and lift their arms higher and can receive the same or a better workout.

Phyllis Jacobson, chairman of the BYU Physical Education Dance Department, said, "There is nothing more exhilarating and fun than to be jumping in the air when doing aerobics. Yet when the feet hit the floor, the trauma begins."

She said the BYU aerobics program is designed to prevent injury to the joints and one of the main rules is people should never jump so high it causes the feet to hit the floor hard.

She said it's important to have a soft rebound when hitting the floor

While high-impact aerobics have been popular for several years, physical safety and other perceived benefits have caused low-impact aerobics to gain in popularity.

and the quality of the movement is very important.

"Doing aerobics should be done as a smooth movement," said Jacobson. "It's a quality movement where you rebound smoothly with the floor."

Call said she and another aerobics instructor conducted a test during the Fall 1988 Semester about whether low-impact aerobics increased muscle strength in the legs.

According to Call, the test was conducted with two classes. Call's class did high-impact aerobics for the entire semester, and the other instructor's class did low-impact aerobics. The classes' muscle strength was tested at the beginning and end of the semester.

Call said there was a significant increase in the leg strength of the low-impact group.

She said there was an increase in the leg strength of both groups, but the increase in the low-impact group was much greater.

Speirs said it's a proven fact that low-impact aerobics burn more calories than high-impact aerobics, and there is also a significantly smaller number of injuries from doing low-impact aerobics.

Kathy Smoot, who taught aerobics at Centennial Apartments last year, said it's important to exercise because it improves one's outlook on life.

"You get in better shape, sleep better and feel good about yourself," said Smoot, a junior majoring in travel and tourism from Brigham City.

Charmaine Dunn, a junior majoring in travel and tourism from Salt Lake City, agrees with Smoot.

"Doing aerobics makes me feel better because it releases all the stress that comes from being a college student," she said. "For me, aerobics is a mental therapy because I'm doing something for myself."

Glen Allen, a senior majoring in Spanish secondary education from Burley, Idaho, took aerobics with a friend. He said it was fun to start the day doing aerobics because it made him feel better and he accomplished more. "When I exercise I'm a different person," said Allen. "I don't exercise as much as I should, but when I do, I feel better and am more aware throughout the day."

Allen said he enjoys aerobics because they're free, easily accessible and can be done just about anywhere.

Smoot said she got the most out of aerobics when she was teaching because she had more momentum and energy when she was in front of people. She said for a person just starting aerobics it's a good idea to start out with low-impact aerobics and then move up to more strenuous things as the body gets used to the workout. She said it's important not to overdo a workout, especially when beginning, because it's easy to become injured.

Jennifer Albert, a sophomore majoring in political science from Vale, Oregon, said aerobics give the body an overall fitness. Albert, who taught aerobics for two summers in California, said she prefers high-impact aerobics because she feels if a person is physically fit he should be "pumping his body to the max."

She said she feels low-impact aerobics don't get the results as fast as high-impact aerobics, but people who are older, injured or have a physical disability should do low-impact aerobics.

Call said she loves aerobics but she doesn't enjoy low-impact aerobics as much because she doesn't have to work her body as hard.

"Low-impact aerobics are definitely better on your joints, and it may be more rewarding in the long run, but I have a hard time staying motivated, so I enjoy the intensity of a more strenuous workout," said Call.

Speirs said low-impact aerobics may sound easy, but they're not.

"They are hard," she said. "I go skiing a lot, and my legs always used to hurt, even though I hadn't been on the slopes too long. Now that I have been doing low-impact aerobics for a few years I can ski all day and my legs don't get tired at all. I feel this is because of the low-impact aerobics I have been involved in."

Students to show off fashions tonight

By REBECCA PIXTON
Universe Staff Writer

The fashion creations of several BYU students will be spotlighted in the Chic Dimensions fashion show tonight in the ELWC Ballroom.

The fashions that will appear were hand-picked by faculty members in the Clothing and Textile Department, said Rebecca Harrison, advertising and graphics chairperson for the show.

Last November, the students submitted designs and swatches of fabric they felt would be appropriate for the designs, and then the faculty members chose the designs they felt were best, she said. There will be more than 100 fashions modeled.

The elements the faculty members looked for in their decision included line of the garment, color, texture and print. The clothes are all couture designs, which means they are one-of-a-kind, and in most cases the clothing was sewn by the students themselves, said Michelle Hyde, director of the show.

Hyde said the show provides an excellent opportunity on several levels for the different people who are involved. "It serves as a showcase for the designers to display their work and offers quality material for their portfolios," she said.

In addition to the designers being benefitted by the show, the merchandising students have the opportunity to gain experience by assembling the show in its entirety.

The models in the show are also BYU students who were selected out of more than 200 applicants. The experience which the show provides for them is an excellent opportunity also, Harrison said.

The fashions will be judged by three guest judges: Jennifer Kaufman-Mathiew, a designer from San Francisco; Peggy Penelton from Nordstrom's; and Noreen Pollei from the BYU Theater Department.

There will be a variety of fashion tastes presented in the show, according to Michael C. H. Yang, co-chairman of the show.

Fashions that represent the future and some that are for fall and spring of next year are all included.

Some theatrical costume designs will also be modeled. One is a costume for "Hello Dolly" that one designer created; another is a costume to be used by Cosmo's girlfriend.

Yang, who also designed several outfits that will be included in the show, said when he is designing, he has a specific person in mind and designs for that person.

"I design with a person in mind and then I think of something that would look good with that person's hair, eyes, personality; just something that they would look good in for most occasions," he said.

Daniel F. Smith, 24, a senior from Kentfield, Calif., majoring in cinematic arts, said he tries to catch the spirit of creativity that is found in so many of the designers today and in the designers of the past. "Designing clothing for me is an outlet that spurs my creativity. It helps to actually see my creations up on stage," Smith said.

Tommaco Cardullo, 26, a sophomore from Italy, will also be presenting several of his creations at the show. He said because he is from Europe he is inclined to design more toward the European style of clothing rather than the American.

"I design women's clothing because I want them to be able to feel feminine and comfortable at all times. I want to accentuate their femininity," he said.

Cardullo said many times the designers of today make women feel as though they have to dress immodestly to feel feminine. But he wants to show, through his clothing, that it is not necessary to be immodest to feel feminine.

"Women can be attractive and show femininity without being immodest. I approach my work with a gentle respect for both the physical and spiritual qualities that women have," Cardullo said.

Clothing should also be able to adjust to the different emotional periods that women encounter, said Cardullo.

Lisa Swanson, 20, a junior majoring in fashion design, said when she is designing clothes she thinks of the one thing she would really like to be wearing at that particular moment. "I think of what would feel really good on at that time — something comfortable and pretty," she said.

Will McClure, 23, a senior majoring in communications, has designed some high-fashion head pieces that will be modeled in the show. He said he wanted to create a head piece that would make a woman look as though she has longer hair and wider shoulders. The fashion show is a black-tie to semi-formal occasion. Tickets will be available tonight from 6 to 8 at the Varsity Theater, ELWC.

BYU falls to Hawaii in WAC opener

By KEVIN J. NIENDORF
Sports Editor

The third time proved to be no charm as the University of Hawaii beat BYU for the third consecutive time this season 72-69 in the quarter-finals of the WAC basketball tournament Thursday in Salt Lake City.

It was all Michael Smith for BYU as he set two more records against Hawaii. He broke the top rebounding record at BYU and set a tournament record 33 points in a WAC tournament game. However, his last second desperation three-point shot to send the game into overtime fell short and Hawaii advanced to the semi-finals tonight against Colorado State.

"I thought it was a game up for grabs," said BYU Coach Ladell Andersen, whose team committed 16 turnovers on the night. "The difference in the game was Hawaii's quickness and taking the ball out of our hands. I still feel games are won and lost with turnovers."

Hawaii Coach Riley Wallace saw it a little differently.

"We've come of age as a team and we've become a much better ball-club," said Wallace, who is in his second year as head coach. "We've been neglected by the press and that has helped us."

Hawaii's Troy Bowe drove the baseline with 27 seconds remaining in the game and hit a layup which put the Rainbows up by three and eventually becoming the winning shot.

"Bowe's layup down the stretch was the back-breaker," said Smith.

Wallace agreed that Bowe's shot was the one that won it for Hawaii, but credited his power forward Vincent Small's defense for much of the win. "Smalls is the man. He held (Andy) Toolson to six points. As far as I'm concerned, (Smalls) is the best defensive player in the WAC."

Perhaps a severe cut on the lip and a bleeding nose sustained by Toolson, as a result of a collision with Cross in the first minute of the second half, assisted Cross' defense. Toolson never did get back on track after the injury.

Hawaii had to play more than half of the game without its star player Reggie Cross as he got into early foul trouble. But Wallace said his team has learned to win without Cross in the past and that has made Hawaii a better team.

Andersen said although putting Cross on the bench wasn't in BYU's game plan, he thought the Cougars had a chance to win with Cross out of the game.

Andersen must have thought that throughout the game as the lead changed possession 23 times.

BYU's final chance to send the game into overtime came when Cross missed the front end of a one-and-one foul shot with 11 seconds remaining. BYU guard Kevin Santiago drove down the court and dished it off to Toolson. Toolson was heavily guarded by Smalls and decided to give it to Smith behind the three-point line.

"Smalls smelled the play perfectly," said Smith, who said the play was designed for Toolson to take at the top of the three-point line. "Smalls played good defense on the last shot. My shot was straight but just didn't have enough on it."

Andersen said, "It's the next to worse loss I've had here."

The Cougars finished the season with their first losing season under Andersen with a 14-15 record. BYU will hope to receive a possible NIT bid within the next few days as a result of being knocked out of contention for the NCAA tournament.

5 Cougars head to nationals

By FRONDA WISEMAN
Universe Sports Writer

Five BYU tracksters will head east this weekend for the NCAA Indoor National Championships and coaches said they are satisfied overall but are sorry two of their finest won't be competing in the long-awaited event.

The nationals-bound Cougars, made up of three freshmen, one sophomore and one junior, will travel to Indianapolis, Ind., Thursday for the meet which will begin Friday.

Christina Wilson has the best high jump in the nation, said women's Coach Craig Poole, but she won't be going to nationals because it conflicts with the regional diving championships and Wilson is a diver.

John Myles-Mills has qualified himself in both the 200-meter dash and the 55-meter dash but won't be going to nationals or competing at all for the remainder of this school year because his "eligibility is being questioned," said men's Coach Willard Hirschi.

"I will do much better there (at nationals) than I've ever done before," said freshman Christy Opara, who broke a 10-year-old BYU record in the long jump on Saturday.

Per Karlsson, a freshman from Sweden, leads the nation with his 66-4 throw in the 35-pound weight and Hirschi said Karlsson has a good chance to win the event.

Frank Fredericks, a sophomore from Namibia, Africa, has qualified himself repeatedly in the 200-meter and 55-meter dash and Hirschi thinks he could place in both events.

Russ Muir, a junior from Sandy, competes in the 800-meter and despite the tough competition in the event, Hirschi said Muir could place as well.

Freshman Lane White, from Arizona, has to improve the most out of the four tracksters but he's capable of doing it, said Hirschi.

"As far as numbers go it's disappointing, we expected more to qualify but they were either hurt or ill," said Poole.

Hirschi said the major competition at nationals will come from LSU, Tennessee and Texas and he thinks BYU could end up in the top 20 and maybe the top 10.

Gymnasts take on No. 2 team

By TROY D. RANDALL
Universe Staff Writer

After falling to Iowa State last weekend by just .25 tenths of a point, the BYU mens gymnastics team is preparing to host the second-ranked team in the country, the Arizona State Wildcats tonight in the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse.

The Cougars are looking to Rex Hughes, a senior from Jefferson City, Mo., majoring in journalism, to lead the young Cougar squad against the Wildcats.

Hughes is coming off his best meet of the year last week at Iowa State where he won the all-around with a score of 55.55.

The Cougars will also rely on Per Branstrom, a junior from Gothenburg, Sweden, majoring in computer science, to do well. Branstrom placed second in the all-around last week at Iowa State with a score of 58.55.

Wildcat gymnasts standouts are Scott Hohlman, who is ranked third in the nation on the floor, and Jody Newman, who is ranked tenth in the nation in the all-around, along with Paul Linne, who is ranked second in the country on the high bar.

"The battle for the all-around between Hughes and Newman should be really exciting," said Sakamoto.

The meet, which will be the last dual meet for the Cougars before the WAC championships, starts at 7 tonight in the Smith Field House. Admission is $2 for students and $3 for the general public.

'Y' women golfers win Dixie tourney

The BYU women's golf team blew away a field of 12, by 13 strokes, and finished first at the Dixie Classic Golf Tournament in St. George this week.

At the BYU-hosted tournament, the Cougars shot a tournament total 899. The closest team to BYU was California State Long Beach who finished with 912.

The BYU star of Monday, Robin Barry, finished third among the individual scorers by carding a 221 tournament total. She shot an even-par 73 on the final round to go along with her 73 on Monday and a 75 on Tuesday.

Paula Suarez, Lachell Simmons and Mary Grace Estueta all finished the tournament with totals of 227.

Meliza Goble of CSLB won the individual title with a Dixie Classic record, 2-under par, 217. Shelly Triplett of Kansas University finished second, shooting a 220 total.

The next tournament for BYU is March 29-31 in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Fair Housing Act will not affect BYU

TODD JAMES WILLARDSON
Universe Staff Writer

The passage of the Fair Housing Act by the Utah State Legislature will not affect BYU approved housing areas approved by BYU. The new bill does one thing — it is state law in harmony with an agreement BYU has with the federal government," said BYU Associate General Counsel Bill Fillmore. In the late 1970s, the federal government questioned and reviewed alleged charges of sex discrimination in BYU approved housing, he said. According to Fillmore, "We negotiated an agreement with the government, based on our First Amendment rights, to segregate housing based on our religious beliefs." "We think fair housing is a principle it should be adhered to, but there are parts of the federal law that could be read to mean that BYU discriminates based upon sex," said Fillmore.

"The federal government found it appropriate for a religious institution such as BYU to be exempt from the policy," said Fillmore. The law now provides an option for all Utah colleges and universities to segregate sex, single and married housing, said Senator K.S. Cornaby, R-Salt Lake City. "When Senator Cornaby and I talked about the legal aspects of the new Utah law, we wanted to make sure that it does not conflict with the exemption BYU received when the federal law was passed," said Fillmore. Cornaby sponsored the bill to help expedite the hearing of discriminatory housing cases in Utah and to discredit any accusations of Utah being a discriminatory state. "The main thrust of the bill is to provide an established standard for fair housing and to provide a state administrative vehicle to hear and regulate housing discrimination complaints," said Cornaby. The bill also "sent a signal" to the state and the nation that the state is not a discriminating state, Cornaby said.

Utah Special Olympics begin today

JELENE YOUNG
Universe Staff Writer

Nearly 400 mentally handicapped athletes will compete today and Saturday in the 1989 Utah Special Olympics Winter Games, said Utah Special Olympics spokesman Dee Jost. Athletes participating in the Winter Games, to be held at the Park City Ski Area and the White Pine Ski Area, will participate in alpine and cross-country skiing, said Jost. There are more than 2,600 athletes registered in the Special Olympics, according to Jost, but they hope to double that number by 1991. She said the organization is trying to reach individuals who may not know about Special Olympics or what it has to offer. Jost said the games are not restricted to children. Events are open to anyone age eight or older with any level of mental retardation. The oldest athlete participating in the Special Olympics is about 60 years old. Sheral Schowe, executive director of Utah Special Olympics, said Special Olympics is often the first opportunity for many individuals to participate in athletic events. However, many are skilled and competent athletes and are integrated into athletic events and competition in their communities. Jost said a separate competition for figure and speed skating will be held March 21-22 at the Cottonwood Heights Recreation Center in Salt Lake City. The Utah Special Olympics holds state-wide competitions each year. These include swimming and figure skating, gymnastics, basketball and spring games. The spring games will be held in June at BYU, Jost said. Schowe said the organization receives no government funds and relies only on private contributions from business and individuals. Because the Utah Special Olympics organization is operated by only five individuals, volunteers are also important. "They're our life blood," Jost said.

Sherry Fausett, a Special Olympics athlete, has done well in previous games. She will be participating again this year.

I'm Coming Back

My first year was great!

JENNIFER CLIFT, from Clackamas, Oregon, is a freshman majoring in Spanish. The oldest of six children, she enjoys music, horseback riding, and working as a disc jockey at dances.

When I came to BYU, I wanted to devote my time to my school work, not cooking and cleaning. And since I live in a study hall, I can spend my time studying in my room, instead of walking back and forth to the library. But best of all, I have forty new fantastic friends who live in my hall. I love this atmosphere.

Duquesne University's newspaper suspended

By GERTRUD STIEFLER
Senior Reporter

It was not business as usual when the newspaper staff of the Duquesne Duke came to work Monday morning at Duquesne University, Pittsburg, Pa.

The locks on the doors had been changed during the night and the members of the editorial board had received notices, hand-delivered to their homes at midnight, that the Duke's constitution had been suspended and the paper was closed.

Four days later the student body president at the Catholic university, Happy Meltzer, called a press conference and announced that he was lifting the sanctions against the paper, but suspending its editor-in-chief, Rebecca Drumm, from her position.

"I thought the paper was shut down because of the ad," Drumm said, referring to a dispute with the student government over an ad in the Duke for a family planning clinic which offered advice on contraception among other consulting services.

Despite complaints from Meltzer that the ad's contents ran contrary to the official dogma of the Catholic Church and his threats of closing the paper, Drumm ran the ad again, topped with a disclaimer in Bold saying the contents of the ad did not necessarily reflect the moral values of the University.

But the summons Drumm received to appear before a judicial board on March 13 made no mention of the ad. Instead the charges against her were the existence of a "secret checking account" for the Duke and allegations that her election campaign for the position of editor was rigged.

"The charges are ludicrous," she said.

Drumm faces punishment ranging from a written reprimand to suspension from the University if she is convicted.

"We have had that checking account for 15 years. The elections were a year ago and nobody has said a word about it until now," she said.

According to Klein, the charges of election fraud originated with Francis Border who ran against Drumm for the editor's position, then stayed on the Duke's staff for 11 months before he transferred to another school.

The Duquesne student government refused to comment on the incident, but Meltzer was quoted in the "Spektrum" as saying the paper was closed because of concerns not related to editorial content, but that the Duke as a student organization had to abide by the same guidelines as the other organizations.

"The bottom line issue here is who owns the newspaper," said Attorney Joel Klein, legal council for the Duke.

He questioned whether the student government was trying to gain control of the paper by denying it the right to have an independent checking account.

The paper currently receives $10,000 from the student government and relies on an additional $20,000 raised independently in advertising revenues.

Brad Adams, photo manager on the 20-member Duke staff, objected to Drumm's suspension from the paper. "This is like saying, guilty before proven innocent," he said.

Duquesne University officials had announced they were not involved in the dispute, Klein said.

Multi-screens get business

Provo movie theater closes

By C.Q. PETERSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Following a recent trend across America, the Paramount theater in Provo has closed its doors to the public since February, said an Economic Developer for Provo.

Gary Golightly said that many single screen theaters across the nation are closing down.

One of the reasons for it is the inability of a single screen theater, such as the Paramount, to do as much business as a multi-screen theater.

Albert Kanahale, business development specialist for Provo, speculates that the Paramount closed because Cineplex Odeon Corp., the owning company, was not willing to upgrade the theater. He also stated that competition from other multi-screen theaters probably has some affect on the closure.

Cineplex Odeon Corp. is based in Toronto, Canada. They have currently placed the Paramount theater on the market for sale. The Cineplex Odeon Corp. declined comment on the theater situation.

The Paramount theater was built in 1912 by the Ashton Theater Company. In 1914, BYU sold the land to the Ashton company, according to Utah County records.

According to Marilyn Perry, city recorder for Provo, the theater was used for various community events. "I remember going to a fashion show there at one time," she said.

Other events that took place there were dance reviews, beauty pageants (Miss Liberty Bell) and movie screenings, said Perry.

The Academy theater, located on the same block as the Paramount, is also a single screen theater that is still in operation.

Mark Grover, house manager for the Academy, said that the theater is doing fine and has no intention to close. Grover said that the Academy will be showing Ghostbuster II this summer and will continue to get headliner movies.

Multi-screen theaters are putting single screen theaters, like the Paramount, out of business, said Gary Golightly, economic developer.

WAGE

so many of our expenses are tied to ... wages.

"Although minimum wage is mostly paid to those on entry-level, like baggers, an increase in the minimum wage puts us in a position of either passing the expenses on to something else or getting rid of employees."

Barth said only a small percentage of minimum-wage earners are heads-of-household and over 25 years old, so students would suffer first from a cut-back in employment.

Ed Mayne, president of the Utah chapter of the AFL-CIO, said he was optimistic about an increase in the minimum wage escaping Bush's veto.

He said the increase was "appropriate," but should take effect immediately, rather than be phased in. He rejected the idea of a training wage as a "sell-out." He said, "If you take the example of a university student taking many different jobs during his time in college, it would apply to every single job he went to."

Mayne said there was no evidence that an increase threatened employment levels. According to National Public Radio, Sen. Kennedy, also using Labor Department statistics, has shown that each time there is a minimum-wage increase, employment has increased, except during the 1975 recession.

"An employer will hire as many employees as he needs, no more, no less," said Mayne.

PERRY

marriage can wait until a full-time mission has been served, he said.

The real purpose in going on a mission is to bring souls to Christ, and to baptize Heavenly Father's children, said Elder Perry.

Everyone should build within themselves a desire to serve, he said. Everyone has been blessed with great talents that need to be developed and used the best way possible.

He counseled young men and women to study and prepare for a mission. This can be done through proper exercise, diet, grooming and learning as much as possible about the gospel, he said.

Even though struggles and hardships are part of a mission, the Lord has promised great blessings to those who serve him. "Be part of it, don't let it pass you by, and let the Lord bless you with the greatest joy you can possibly experience," said Elder Perry.
